Crawford Begins First Six-Year Term

Shreveport native Edward Crawford was sworn-in today for his first six-year term on the Board of Supervisors for the University of Louisiana System.

Crawford, who represents District 4, has been on the Board since last April when Governor Bobby Jindal appointed him to take over the remainder of Michael Woods term.

He is a managing partner of Atco Investment Company and currently serves as vice-president of the Board of Trustees for Centenary College of Louisiana, on the Board of the Community Foundation of Shreveport-Bossier, on the Board of Southfield School, and on the Board of the Shreveport Symphony.

Edward Crawford, III

Alluding to his public service experience, Crawford joked, "I think I've been sworn-in more than anyone else on this board."

McNeese Focuses on Access and Success

McNeese State University Vice President for Academic Affairs Jeanne Daboval updated the Board of Supervisors Special Committee on Access and Success regarding their efforts to improve student enrollment, retention, and graduation rates.

Explaining access and success is integral to the university's mission and core values, Daboval said the university has targeted fiscal and human resources on initiatives such as flexible course delivery, collaboration with K-12, identifying and supporting at-risk students, increasing scholarships, and including advising evaluations in faculty reviews.

Special programs created specifically for access to success include the Write to Excellence Center that provided 2,430 tutorials over the last year and Freshman Foundations, which uses upperclassmen to teach and mentor freshmen.

UL System Student Board Member and McNeese SGA President Morgan Verrette served as a peer mentor for the Freshman Foundations program.

"It was rewarding to teach students how to succeed in college, about our traditions at McNeese and what makes us unique," said Verrette.

Such efforts have already started yielding benefits. According to the National Survey of Student Engagement, McNeese scored above the national average on how students work to meet instructors' expectations and how students positively rated their relationships with faculty member and administrative personnel and offices.

"We are blessed for the programs we have. Our professors and advisors always have their doors open to students because they want you to succeed," said Verrette.

ULS Employee Earns Online Degree from NSU

Northwestern State University President Randy Webb (left) congratulates Brooke Crum on her completion of the Master's Degree Program in Educational Technology. Crum, a University of Louisiana System employee, earned her degree online while working for the University of Louisiana System.

"We are very proud of Brooke," said UL System President Randy Moffett. "She's such a dedicated member of our staff that she chose to stay in Baton Rouge and work instead of attend her graduation at Northwestern. Every graduate should have an opportunity to take her picture with the university's president."
